REASON FOR LATE CHANGES

- The Child and Youth Worker program has been and continues to be in high demand. Targets are met yearly, and the attrition rate is low. In addition, the graduate employment rate also meets the college's targets. However, this program has changed very minimally over the last many years. Upon review, gaps were identified and the following changes within this document, if approved, will be implemented.
- During the 2011/12 CYW Program Review, the external focus group recommended we make curriculum content changes with regard to field preparation such as increased concentration in the areas of work ethic, professional behaviour (attendance, being prepared for work, use of social networks and technology, confidentiality, etc.), self-care plans, personal triggers, and various types of treatment and interventions for children. Results also stressed the importance of preparing students for many mental health issues identified in children at schools. Students need to increase their knowledge and application of life skills to prepare clients for independence. The focus group also felt students need additional exposure to the latest in treatment options such as CBT, Solution-focused therapy, and Resiliency Models.
- The CYW internal focus group identified the need to prepare the students for the current economic picture of employment: relief, shift, contract, private practice. In addition, staff recognize the increasing young age of children with mental health challenges in schools and agencies which require additional training for the CYW. Furthermore, students need to be prepared to be active members of an inter-professional team. Students also need to develop strong written communication skills for writing proposals, minutes, agendas, and various reports.
- The provincial Coordinators' Conference held once per year in May identified similar areas as mentioned above as needing additional skill level development particularly in the area of children's mental health and field preparation.
- The changes identified on the degree audit will facilitate an easier transferability to other post-secondary institutions because of the three-hour courses rather than two-hour courses.
- The Program Advisory Committee met, reviewed and agreed with all of the program review recommendations at the meeting October 19, 2012.
- Meetings with agency/school community partners recommend better matches of student skills level and preparation to particular placements. In addition, the results of these meetings suggest students need more preparation in the area of professional conduct.
